I think the economy has gone through enough and it is time to leave Microsoft to their own business, which they happen to do very well. The idea that Microsoft should pay damages to AOL/Time Warner is completely ridiculous. By making the IE browser free they enhanced competition and the beauty of it is, we live in a capitalistic society, which makes this possible. Microsoft makes quality software that I'm sure even government employees use. Bill Gates is a true businessman and he and Microsoft should not be punished for the skill and competence they portray in the way they run their company.
